

Hello ACPE Members,

I'm delighted to be joining ACPE as the new Director of Operations. I am a native Atlantan and currently live in Lawrenceville, GA, with my husband of 40 years and our two playful pups.

In my role, I oversee a broad range of operational functions, including Human Resources, Legal, Risk Management, and IT. I joined ACPE in early March, and during my first two months I have been focused on strengthening staff engagement, managing talent acquisition efforts and hiring new staff while also partnering closely with colleagues on change management initiatives—particularly the implementation of our new technology platform, iMIS. It has been a busy and rewarding start, and I appreciate the collaboration and support I've already experienced across the organization.

Prior to joining ACPE, I worked both in a Fortune 500 manufacturing environment and alongside a solo entrepreneur in the real estate and senior living home industry. Earlier in my career, I spent several years in the legal field with a boutique intellectual property law firm. These experiences provided me with a broad perspective and the ability to adapt across organizations of varying sizes, structures, and missions.

Having worked across such a wide range of organizations and industries, I've developed a strong foundation in human resources, legal operations, and strategic organizational processes. My passion has always been creating efficient systems, supporting teams, and helping organizations navigate change while maintaining a strong, people-centered culture.

I'm honored to be part of a dynamic, faith-based educational organization that serves communities across the country. I look forward to continuing to learn from all of you, collaborating across teams, and contributing to ACPE's mission in a meaningful and impactful way.
